Late Foreign Articles
VIA NEW-YORK AND NORFOLK.

[The ſubſequent articles of Foreign Intelligence are from the Belfaſt News-Letter, of April 20. They are principally extracts from Paris papers; and, though of ſome importance in the hiſtory of European events, have not hitherto been published in this country.] [Mer. Adv.

LONDON, April 20.

Advices were yeſterday morning received from Plymouth, ſtating the arrival there of the St. Florenzo and Amelia frigates from a cruize, much diſabled, having had an action on the 9th inſt. off Belleiſle, with three French frigates and a cutter, viz. La Vengeance, of forty eight 24 pounders, and 400 men; La Cornielle, of forty four 18 pounders; La Semillante, of forty two 18 pounders, and a cutter gun veſſel of 12 guns, the whole of which being near Houdie Rocks and the batteries firing on our frigates, they eſcaped by running into the Loire, after an action of an hour and 20 minutes, in which they ſuffered very much in loſs of men.

The Florenzo had 1 killed and 18 wounded; the Amelia 2 killed and 19 wounded.—Both ſhips ſuffered very ſeverely in their maſts and rigging. After the action, the St. Florenzo captured the Decade French brig, from which they obtained the names of the French ſquadron, and that the French commodore, with 100 men on board his ſhip, were killed—The other ſhips ſuffered great loſs of men, &c.

FROM THE FRENCH PAPERS.

The General in Chief of the Armies of Italy at Naples, to the Executive Directory.
Head-Quarters at Marmirolo,
6th April, 1799.

Citizens Directors,

From my laſt diſpatches you would foreſee that I would ſoon be obliged to engage the enemy a ſecond time, in order to compel him to quit the right ſide of the Adige, and to prevent him from taking me in flank and rear at the moment of paſſing that river.—This battle took place yeſterday. The action was in an inſtant extended throughout the whole line.

Generals Victor and Grenier proceeded along the banks of the Adige below Verona to take poſſeſſion of the village of St. James. Gen. Delmas, with his advanced guard, was to penetrate by Doſſobono, and protect the attack of theſe two diviſions. Gen. Moreau, with Harry's and Montrichard's diviſions was charged with engaging every corps of the enemy he might find between Villafranca and Verona.—Finally, Serrurier, who was charged with the attack of Villafranca, who having taken that little town, was to purſue the enemy and drive him into the Adige. I know not whether the enemy was acquainted with my plan. But be this as it may, Gen. Serrurier, after having been repulſed at the attack of Villafranca, ſucceeded, however, in obtaining poſſeſſion of it by a vigorous charge, and took more than nine hundred priſoners. Gen. Moreau, with his two diviſions, having forced the enemy in the plain to fall back, marched ſtraight to Verona. Gen. Delmas, notwithſtanding his wound, which was re-opened by a fall from his horſe, during the night, would command his diviſion. I took my poſt at this attack, as forming the central point, and alſo to ſend aſſiſtance to any other place where it might be wanted. The action laſted from eleven in the morning to four in the afternoon. The four diviſions on the left had a marked advantage over the enemy, notwithſtanding his immenſe ſuperiority.

Generals Victor and Grenier, who at firſt obtained ſome advantage by the impetuoſity of their troops, were compelled to ſlacken their attack about four o'clock; and as the enemy continully received reinforcements from Verona, they were obliged to order a retreat about 6 o'clock.

The diviſion of General Delmas ſuſtained ſeveral charges without being broken. The numerous troops which the enemy had detached towards the center enabled him to extend his line upon the flank of the diviſion; but Gen. Delmas manœuvred with extraordinary ſkill, and at laſt compelled him to retreat.

At five in the evening, after theſe different events, Gen. Serrurier remained maſter of Villafranca. Gen. Moreau engaged the enemy's camp almoſt under the wall of Verona—Gen. Delmas was maſter of the field of battle; but the retreat of the two diviſions of the right leaving my right flank uncovered, I ordered the two other diviſions to preſerve their ground until night came on, and afterwards to effect their retreat to the poſitions they occupied defore the battle.

Such, Citizens Directors, is the reſult of this affair—Two thouſand priſoners were taken from the enemy, and ſeven pieces of cannon. The field of battle was covered with more than four thouſand dead bodies, for we fought during ſeven hours with a moſt terrible obſtinacy. I have loſt nearly 3000 men killed, wounded and taken: and three pieces of artillery.

FLORENCE, 8th Germinal, March 28.

On the 4th the government was informed, that notwithſtanding all the efforts made by M. de Manfredim, the French were reſolved to occupy Tuſcany, and that while a corps of troops was proceeding to Florence,—In conſequence of this information, the following proclamation was iſſued on the morning of the 5th.

"Ferdinand III. by the Grace of God, Prince Royal of Hungary and Bohemia, Archduke of Auſtria, Grand Duke of Tuſcany, &c.

"We ſhall regard it as a proof of fidelity, attachment, and affection on the part of our faithful ſubjects, if, at the time of the entry of the French troops into Florence, they reſpect the French corps, and all the individuals who compoſe it, & abſtain from all acts that might give occaſion to any kind of complaint; this prudent conduct will ſecure to them new claims to our good will.

Done at Florence, the 24th of March, 1799. (Signed).
"FERDINAND,
"J. FRANCISCO SERATI,
"GAETENO RANIOLDE."

In the courſe of the morning on the 5th Germinal, a number of general Sherer's proclamations, and thoſe of general Gauthier, commander of the diviſion of Tuſcany, were circulated in the city.

At 4 o'clock on the ſame morning the French corps appeared at the gate of St. Gallo. It conſiſted of infantry, cavalry, and a detachment of artillery, with ſome pieces of cannon, and was commanded by general Gauther. The French advanced into the city without experiencing any oppoſition. They proceeded to the principal poſts, which they immediately occupied, the Tuſcan troops who guarded them having laid down their arms.

On the 6th, the neceſſary preparations were made for the departure of the Grand Duke, and on the 7th, in the morning, he left the town, accompanied by his wife and children, and eſcorted by a detachment of French troops. The principal officers of the court and ſome domeſtics followed him. He is to proceed to Vienna.

Trees of Liberty have been planted in the ſquare of St. Croix, and that of new St. Maria.

ARMY OF THE DANUBE.

Straſburgh, 20th Germinal (April 9.)

General Collaud is appointed Commander of the 5th Military, Diviſion, in the room of Chateauneuf-Randon.

General Maſſena arrived here yeſterday evening. He has left the command of Helvetia and the Griſons with General Lacourbe.

The Army of the Danube daily receives coſiderable reinforcements. The whole of that has not yet paſſed the Rhine; there ſtill remains on the right bank of that river a body of troops, conſiſting of 3d and 4th diviſions of the army, under the command of General St. Cyr: he has fixed his head-quarters at Kork, about half a myriameter on the other ſide of Kehl: his advanced guard is at Offenbourg.

Yeſterday morning he reconnoitred the country as far as Gegenbach, where the valley of Kinche, in which the Auſtrians have their advanced poſts, commences.

Another body of troops occupies the paſſages of Rinchen, Oberkirk, and Oppenan, leading to Kneibis.

The principal body of the Auſtrians is at this moment on the other ſide of the Black Foreſt; but we are ſtill ingorant what plans they may have formed. It appears only that the Archduke meditates an attack on the Helvetic Republic. A conſiderable corps is aſſembling in the neighbourhood of Italy, and his principal magazines are at Villingen and Doneſchingen.

General Sztarray's diviſions will attempt to raiſe the blockade of Philipſburg.

Another letter same date.

Gen. Maſſena, who has juſt arrived here, and generals Ferino, St. Cyr, and ſeveral other commanders, have had a conſultation with Jourdan, who, it is confidently aſſerted will this day ſet off for Paris.

Our troops were to evacuate Little Baſle, and break down the bridge which joins it to the other part of the city.

By a courier who reached Raſtadt on the 18th (7th) Count Metternich has been commanded to communicate to the Deputation the orders tranſmitted by his court, to quit the Congreſs, and to declare in the name of the Emperor, that his Majeſty is under the neceſſity of revoking all the conceſſions which have been made during its ſitting, to the Miniſters Plenipotentiary of the French Republic, and which had been acceded to only with the Imperial ratification, (ſalvo ratificationi Cæſaris et imperii) and conſequently that all matters are reſtored to the ſame ſtate in which they were before the Congreſs of Raſtadt.

Another letter same date.

General St. Cyr, has brought back his head quarters to Offenbourg to cover that country untill the army of the Danube reſumes the offenſive. The troops detached from the Army of Obſervation have their advanced poſts on the Kneibis. The Auſtrians are at Ereudenſtadt and in the valley of Kintzig. Prince Charles has his head-quarters at Geiffengen on the Danube. The blockade of Philipſburg is raiſed.

General Maſſena has taken the proviſional command of the army. It was given up to him by Gen. Jourdan, who has obtained from the Directory a leave of abſence for 15 days, to re-eſtabliſh his health, which fatigue has much impaired. He is to ſet out for Paris to-morrow, for the purpoſe of concerting with the Directory and the Miniſter at War the proper meaſures for eſtabliſhing our army ſpeedily to reſume the offenſive. He takes with him only one of his Aides-De-Camp and an Adjutant General.

Ferino, who commands the right wing of the army of the Danube, departed this morning to replace proviſionally Maſſena in the command of that of Helvetia.

General Bernadotte, who was appointed Commander in Chief of the Army of Obſervation, and who, after its union with that of the Danube, was to have commanded two diviſions, forming the left wing of that army, has reſigned. His ſucceſſor is to be General Colland, who is diſtinguiſhed by his military talents, his love of order and diſcipline, and ſeveral other qualities; we know not yet who is to replace this General in the command of the conquered departments, and five military diviſions.

Head-quarters of his Royal Highness the Archduke Charles at Guisengen, 3d April, 1799.

The advanced poſts of the army extend on the one ſide through Peterelle to beyond Villingen, and on the other ſide to near Neuſtadt.

According to the lateſt accounts the enemy has evacuated the paſſages of which he had obtained poſſeſſion in the Tyrol.

A diſpatch from Field Marſhal Kray, which has this moment arrived, announces that there has been a very ſharp engagement near Legnano, in which, however, neither party had the advantage.

ARMY OF HELVETIA.

Head quarters at St. Gall, 14 Germinal, 7th year of the French Republic, one and indiviſible.

Proclamation of the General in Chief to the People of Helvetia.

HELVETIANS,

The French commanders inform me that perfidious or lunatical perſons commit acts of violence againſt the French troops when they march ſingle or in ſcattered bodies. I learn likewiſe, that ſymptoms of inſurrections have appeared in ſeveral quarters of Switzerland.

Helvetians! Why this ſudden change? Why do you deſtroy that indiſpenſible harmony which exiſted between you and the French army? Why do you diſturb that peace which reigned in your abodes?

It would thus ſeem, that you give ear to the inſinuations and attrocious plots of the enemies of the French Republic, who are alſo your enemies! It would thus appear that you conceive the French army is no longer in a ſtate to reſiſt the Auſtrian forces! The army which I command has beat them at every point where it has been engaged, and will ſtill beat them, ſhould they dare to enter your territory.

But can you imagine that amidſt the efforts of courage, and the ſacrifices which that brave army makes for your defence, that it would coolly ſee its heroes falling under the attacks of cowardly aſſaſſins? Do you think that I myſelf will heſitate to take terrible vengeance on theſe infamous enormities!

Helvetians who remain attached to France and your conſtitution! Save your country from the evils which threaten it by repreſſing the guilty! Point them out to your government, that their crimes may be inſtantly overtaken with puniſhment.

As to myſelf I have ſhewn that I knew how to protect you, whilſt I beheld in you a faithful ally, ſo will I ſhew myſelf capable of puniſhing you, if you become traitors, and violators of the faith of treaties.

The ſecurity of the French army and your own ſecurity alſo, will be the rule of my conduct.

I therefore declare, that from this moment, I ſhall hold the ſeveral communes reſponſible for all the events that ſhall happen within their territory to the annoyance of Frenchmen.

I further declare, that columns of the French army will march with rapidity towards the cantons which ſhall ſhew any diſpoſition to inſurrection, and that ſuch cantons ſhall be ravaged with fire and ſword.

This proclamation ſhall be printed in the two languages, publiſhed and poſted up through the whole of Helvetia and copied into the general orders or the army.

(Signed) MASSENA.

Extract of a letter from Citizen Burthe, Capt. Aid de Camp to General Maſſena, dated from Head-quarters at St. Gall, 12 Germinial [1ſt April.]

In ſeveral Paris Journals I have ſeen the number of Swiſs in arms, under General Keller ſtated at 19,000. Truth, and the poſition of that army, oblige me to declare that no more than 1600 have joined it.—The Helvetic government, indeed makes the greateſt efforts for the formation of ſix demi-brigades. But we muſt regard the moment as ſtill diſtant, when they will be capable of joining us.

ARMY OF THE EAST.

Buonaparte, Member of the National Inſtitute, and General in Chief, to the Executive Directory. Head Quarters, Cairo, 22 Pluviose—Feb 16

Citizens Directors,

We have learned by the way of Suen, that ſix French frigates, which were cruizing at the mouth of the Red Sea, had taken Engliſh prizes to the amount of more than twenty millions in value.

The Pamadam, which commenced yeſterday, has been celebrated upon my part with the greateſt pomp. I have diſcharged the ſame functions which the Pacha formerly had to perform.

General Deſſaix is more than eighty myriameters from Cairo, and very near the cataracts. He is ſearching for the ruins of Thebes. I am every moment in expectation of official details of a battle he has had with the Mamelouks, and in which Murrat Bey has been killed, and five or ſix Beys have been taken priſoners.

General Andreoſi and Citizen Berthollet are on their return from an excurſion to the Lakes of Natron and the Convents of the Copts. They have made ſeveral extremely intereſting diſcoveries; among others ſome excellent natron, (native alkali) which the ignorance of the miners prevented them from before obſerving. This branch of the commerce of Egypt will thence become ſtill more important."

BOUNAPARTE.

Copy of a letter from Breſt.
15th Germinal, (April 4.)

"I hope, may friend, to be able to ſee you again about the end of this monht. The miniſter of marine, under the conviction that his preſence here will ſoon ceaſe to be neceſſary, intends returning to Paris in a few days Thanks to his zeal and activity we have now 24 ſhips of the line in as compleat a ſtate of equipment as the preſent ſtate of the marine will admit. Their crews, it is true, are not entirely compleated; but ſailors are coming in to us daily, and to wards the midnle of next month all the ſhips will have their neceſſary complement. The money, which the miniſter has brought down to Breſt, has produced the beſt effect. To the diſcouragement which the ſeemingly total neglect of the marine had inſpired, has ſucceeded an activity of which we have had but few examples."

By a letter from Rome, dated the 26th Ventoſe, it appears that Civita Vecchia has made a very deſperate reſiſtance againſt the French:—That Letter ſays—"It is true that a few days before it was reduced, General Merlin had attempted an aſſault, but he was repulſed. To avoid a father effuſion of blood, he determined to grant a capitulation to the inhabitants, the principal articles of which were, that there ſhould be a general amneſty—that the town and the fortreſs ſhould be guarded in common by the French troops and the citizens—and that no contribution ſhould be levied upon the inhabitants."

The late Revolutionary Government at Piedmonte reſigned on the 25th March, and a new one was iſtalled, which proceeded to the proviſional organization of the country into four departments, after the French manner. That of which Turin is the capital is to be called the Department of the Eridan.

The Helvetic Directory have removed from his office the Perfect of Schaffhauſen, who expreſſed joy upon learning that the Auſtrians approached. The Prefect of Lugano has been diſmiſſed on the ſame account.

PARIS, April 1.

The prince of Conde's head-quarters were removed on the 16th of February, from the city of Dubnez, in Volhinia, and will be transferred to ſome place in Lithunia.

The Helvetic Legiſlative body decreed on the 21ſt of March, that the 18,000 auxiliaries ſhould be taken by lot from among the national guard.

General Keller, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf in the French ſervice at Oſtend, has at preſent the command of a conſiderable body of Swiſs troops, extending from Conſtance to Reinegg.

"Head-Quarters, Bruſſels, March 19. General Cervoni, Commander in Chief of the nine United Departments, to the inhabitants of Belgium, and the troops quartered in it.

"Citizens,

"It is the wiſh of Auſtria, and the war is renewed. Our triumphant armies are already on their march to the banks of the Danube, and traverſe the Tyrolian Alps. We muſt tranſmit to poſterity new proofs of French valor. Let our enemies tremble! The French will be victorious. Citizens it is neceſſary to recommend to you peace, harmony, and attachment to the Government, under the preſſure of circumſtances which arreſt the attention of the world? The ſpirit of hideous fanaticiſm, the power of ſeductive gold, the expiring influence of the Cabinet of Vienna, every art will be practiſed to excite new commotions in thoſe fine countries which nature has deſtined to be happy. Let nothing then terrify you. You are protected by the powerful ægis of the firſt nation in the univerſe. And ye ſoldiers whoſe lot is to repel every attack on the part of the Engliſh, to enforce the execution of the laws, and to maintain order and tranquility in the United Countries, you are in poſſeſſion of the ſentiments of the government—reſpect a people rendered free by your exertions, and let a ſtrict diſcipline, a juſt regard for perſons and property, convince them that you ſee a brother in every Belgian, and that you love him as ſuch.—But if freſh tumults compel you once more to exert yourſevels, let your vengeance be terrible, and do not give quarter to the rebel! Your country relies on your wiſdom, your loyalty, and your courage.

(Signed) "CERVONI."

The following diplomatic note has been diſtributed in Germany, by order of the Court of Vienna.

"The French Directory continues to advance the moſt exaggerated pretenſions and the imperial court will not ſuffer itſelf to be degraded by republicans, whoſe object is to humble all princes. Twenty five millions of faithful and devoted ſubjects, the beſt army in Europe, and immenſe reſources of all kinds are ſtrong inducements to inſpire the Emperor with a juſt ſentiment of his dignity and power. With ſuch means, the Emperor will not allow himſelves to be dictated to, and his example will be followed by every Monarch whoſe throne is now threatened by innovation and anarchy. The cauſe of Kings, when united, can no longer be doubtful—but if they remain divided, their reign muſt ſoon be at an end, and Europe muſt be expoſed to the moſt dreadful calamities."

Extract from a proclamation by Bernadotte to the people of Germany, issued from his head quarters at Manheim.

"Tyrants and their iniquitous counſellors have miſtaken our patience for ſleep, and our prudence for death. But nations who have reconquered their liberty are no more liable to ſleep than to death

"Germans! the hoſtilities which we now commence are entirely defenſive. You will no longer miſapprehend the odious machiaveliſm of the houſe of Auſtria. Ever dextrous in engaging you in its quarrels, it would again convert a war undertaken for its own purpoſes, into a war of the empire, in order to encreaſe its own ſtrength by exhauſting yours.

"You will perceive how much it has directed againſt your intereſts its monſtrous alliance with England, which ſupports itſelf only by the troubles of the continent—and with Ruſſia, which wiſhes to impoſe upon civilized Europe the chains of Aſiatic barbariſm.

"Germans! The maintenance of your religion, your ſafety, your liberty, and the independence of your governments, which are on terms of friendſhip with us, enjoin the neceſſity of your uniting your efforts to our's to drive theſe conſpiring hordes to their native dens.

"Your property will be held sacred. The laws of the republic punish with death those who dare to violate the asylum of the peaceful inhabitants—and they shall be rigorously executed.

"Unite with us, Germans, in declaring war against the House of Austria, and against the barbarians of the North, who are again desirous of inundating your territory."

FROM BELFAST PAPERS.

BELFAST, April 26.

The Paris papers, which have been received to the 16th, and from which we have given considerable extracts in this day's paper contain most important advices. We may collect from the letters of the commanders the disastrous situation in which they find themselves; and though they do not contain the particulars, they confirm the statements of the success of the Austrians in every part. The pretexts made use of in the short paragraph published by the Directory, (inserted in our last,) of Jourdan's ill health, and of his having desired leave of absence, but poorly conceal the entire demolition of the plan of the campaign, while they betray their design of throwing the whole blame upon him

The most valuable part of the intelligence contained in these papers, in our mind, is that which confirms the account of the insurrection in Switzerland, or rather of the determined hostility of the Swiss people to the despotism which they have suffered under the name of Liberty. The Proclamation of Massena states more forcibly even than circumstantial details, the condition of that country.

In Italy we have, from the French Commander himself, the acknowledgment of a most important defeat on the 5th inst. He owns the loss of 3000 men; and after a most desperate battle, failed of accomplishing his obvious purpose, the reduction of Verona. This engagement is material to the fate of Italy, for it will inspire the Austrians with confidence at the very moment when the reinforcement of Russians would arrive to their aid. The French papers merely glance at the former advantages gained by General Kray on the Adige, and it is clear, from their own account, that they have been as unfortunate in this quarter as upon the Rhine.

The Gazette of Saturday evening informs the discomfiture of the enemy in Italy, and contains intelligence of the Piedmontese insurgents having become so formidable to their new masters, as to threaten the capital.

LONDON, April 6.

The following paragraph is extracted from the Paris papers of the 12th ult.—"We hear from Brest, that there have been great changes in the naval army, Vice Admiral Delamotte, who was Chief of the Etat Major, is named Commander in Chief; and Vice-Admirals Bedout and Courand, Commanders of squadrons. The Chief of division, Durand-Linois, quits the ship the J. J. Rousseau, to be Chief of the Etat Major General; and the Chief of division, Christy-Palliere, is Adjutant General. The ships on board which are the Generals, are—l'Ocean, le Republican, and le Terrble, all three deckers."

THE ONTARIO.

We are sorry to be under the unpleasant necessity of conveying to our readers the following confirmation of the loss of the Ontario, which was handed us by the owners of the ship. We mingle our regrets with those of our fellow citizens, on the unwelcome intelligence.

Extract of a letter from capt John Wheaton, to his owners, dated at New-Haven, 12th June.

"I embrace the earliest opportunity to inform you of the arrival of your ship Swift, from Canton; I left her yesterday at Saybrook, all well, going down the Sound. You are informed, no doubt, of the loss of the Ontario. I shall be in New-York by the first packet: I have not time to say more, as the mail is closing."

The loss of the ship Ontario, having attracted much attention, and been attended with some interesting circumstances, we have fortunately succeeded in obtaining a narrative of the particulars of the shipwreck, from the journal of one of the officers on board. We were unable to procure it in due time for the paper of this day, but shall publish the whole of it to-morrow.

We are informed by one of the that it is expected enough oil will up by different boats, to satisfy the Speedwell, lately wrecked near the Hook ---One of the Pilot-boats had taken up nine barrels.

Since writing the above, the Pilot-boat Commerce, with 8 casks, and the Hound with 27 casks, got up from 50 miles below the Hook, where the oil was picked up.

A wit lately observed, that the contending armies in Europe would want, during the present campaign, as much paper for wadding as was consumed during the 18 months pacific Congress at Rastadt

NORWICH, June 12.

The Sloop of war building in this place for the Federal Government progresses with rapidity, and her present appearances promise her as a very valuable addition to our rising Navy.

MR. FENNO,

In consequence of an electioneering attack on Mr. Daniel Stroud and myself, which appeared a few days ago in the "Aurora, the following observations have been handed to the editor of that paper for publication: as they have been refused a place in that impartial and patriotic repository, be good enough to insert them in the Gazette of the United States, and oblige

Your friend and humble serv't,

THOS. B. DICK.

EASTON, (P.) JUNE 3, '99.

To the Editor of the Aurora,

CITIZEN,

Permit me, through the medium of your paper, to tender my grateful acknowledgments, to your delectable correspondent from Northampton county.

To be publicly announced in the "Aurora" as an enemy to sedition poles, &c. is so flattering and distinguished an honor, that I am firmly persuaded the pithy author of that elegant composition, is really an obsequious friend in disguise.

The sweet remembrance of his inestimable kindness in this instance, nothing but omnipotent power shall ever obliterate.

With a refined sensibility of soul, of which the bosom of disinterested friendship is alone susceptible, he has ingeniously designed to conser a favor of incalculable magnitude without imposing a correspondent obligation. His inexpressible goodness, has penetrated the auricles and ventricles of my heart and expanded even my lungs, almost to bursting.

I beg him, for the present, to accept the assurances of my most profound consideration, and to believe that his future dignified and dignifying communications, through the same auspicious channel, will be promptly and properly reciprocated.

Health and Fraternity!

THOS. B. DICK.

Extract of a letter from captain Thomas Orange, of the ship Orange, of New-York, dated Teneriffe, 2d May, 1799.

"We had discharged all our cargo at Madeira, except 1600 or 2000 bushels of corn, and had received 12 tons of iron on board, and would have been dispatched in a little time, had not we been blown to sea, and captured within ten miles of Funchall Road by two French privateers, a sloop of four 12 pounders and 60 men, and Le Mars of 18, nines and twelves, and 150 men, who robbed me and my people of every thing, and turned us ashore here, and God knows how my people will get home. Had it not been for Mr. Barry, myself and people would have starved."

BOSTON, June 12.

IMPORTANT NEWS

From Europe may daily be expected.—Yesterday the schooner Phœnix, Capt. Gales, arrived here in 45 days from Portsmouth, in Great-Britain. Capt. G. informs, that on the sixth day after he sailed from Portsmouth, an express cutter spoke the Topaze, frigate,—the convoying ship—and informed the Commander, that he had fallen in with the French fleet from BREST; and was ordered direct to England to give the intelligence; and that on the receipt of the news, the Topaze directed the whole convoy to shift its course from northward to southward, and to show no lights.

Capt. G. brought no papers; but confirms the accounts of the defeats of the French.

FOREIGN ARTICLES.

Accounts from Inspruck, April 4. say, "The French have entirely evacuated the Tyrol. In their retreat they have been guilty of the greatest excesses.—At Nauders they took away the sacred utensils and plate from the churches, broke the statues, and tore the pictures of the saints—Women who had taken refuge in some stables were burnt in them, together with the cattle."

April 7, a body of Austrians entered Kleeneer, in Switzerland, a league from Basle.

On the 31st March the Russian column of 24,000 men, was at Bassano, three short days march from Verona. Corfu [in the Gulph of Venice] is to become the Russian and Turkish rendezvous. The Emperor Paul is determined on a new levy of 100,000 men.
